FATE OF THE INTERNAL REVENUE BILL ASSURED

The President will Allow no One to be Discharged by Reason of Failure to Pay Political Assessments

SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE OREGONIAN.

WASHINGTON, July [illegible]. Merrick began the direct examination of [illegible] he had [illegible] They were upon the [illegible] Ingersoll asked permission to examine witness. A dispute [illegible] Merrick consented to the request as a matter of courtesy, but Ingersoll [illegible] privilege again, saying he would ask no favor from the other side. Drafts were given him by [illegible] drafts [illegible] by Brady in [illegible] of his indebtedness. Merrick enquired [illegible] Brady had [illegible] within the last 18 months [illegible] but objection was [illegible] by counsel for defense [illegible] Merrick [illegible] expected to show that Brady [illegible] on January last and he [illegible] would [illegible] show an admission by Brady [illegible] his indebtedness. Court ruled the question [illegible] had a right [illegible] In objection Wilson said he knew of all the particulars of that matter, but court insisted he must not thrust his word into the case. Witness resuming said [illegible] not made public the transactions at the interview because he usually went to an attorney in such cases and because Brady was then involved in the scandal. He thought if he kept quiet Brady might [illegible] to repay him. After considering this fact witness held the Kellogg drafts and other important papers. After another futile attempt to introduce the Brady letter to Walsh, McSweeny was finally allowed to proceed and asked witness why he did [illegible] and [illegible] when Brady seized his [illegible] The question was ruled out, however, because it had been asked in substance before, and Merrick was directed to take the witness by court, who said he would have no speech making upon that occasion. Witness was asked to produce the [illegible] letter from Brady, but objection was sustained by court because it had not been put in evidence. After recess Merrick asked what disposition had been made of the indictment found against him. He answered he was tried and acquitted. Another unsuccessful attempt was made by Merrick to introduce the Ganger letter, court holding it was inadmissible as evidence at this trial. A letter from the attorney to Walsh was put in. It merely transmits the account upon which attachment was brought in New York. The object of its introduction was explained to be the discrepancy between accounts in two civil suits. Witness identified several letters and was asked by Merrick if he had ever been approached by S. W. Dorsey with the object of settling Brady's indebtedness. This question was ruled out. Postal drafts to the amount of $15,000, payable to Price, were presented witness, who said $[illegible] in commercial paper had been added and of this total of $20,000 Brady had been credited with one-half. Kellogg had given him drafts with the understanding that Brady was to receive one half the proceeds. This answer was ruled out by court and the stenographer directed to suppress it. Witness was then dismissed after notification from prosecution to consider himself as still under subpena, and court adjourned.

Ex-Attorney General MacVeagh and ex-Postmaster General James were in attendance on the star route trials this morning. MacVeagh was called to the stand and asked if he had ever had a conversation with Mr. Rerdell in matters set out in the indictment. MacVeagh said he had such conversation in June 1881. He was asked to repeat the substance of Rerdell's remarks, but objection was immediately made by Ingersoll, who proceeded to argue that this conversation did not fall within the rules of law as evidence, and it could not be received as evidence even against Rerdell.

MacVeagh said he had more than one interview with Rerdell while preparing his books. He intended to get the original book from New York to corroborate his statements. All the conspirators were known by assumed names. On one route for which they were paid service was never even begun. Rerdell did not try to get any information from witness.

The defense then cross examined witness.

MacVeagh testified that he had more than one interview with Rerdell, who said he intended to make a clean breast of these star route matters and had been sent to witness by ex-Senator Clayton and Postmaster General James. Rerdell said he became connected with the business while Senator Dorsey was a member of the senate. J. W. Dorsey, Miner, Peck and Boone, who was dropped later and succeeded by Vail, constituted the combination. They sent out blank bids to postmasters in the west, when they returned them certified. He had spent an entire night in Dorsey's committee room at the capitol preparing bids. The idea was to take contracts at any low figure to keep off bidders and then have them increased and expedited by Brady. So far as this testimony related to Brady it was stricken out, but the court refused to exclude the reference to Dorsey, Vail and others because Rerdell then spoke of his employers, and in reflection the court also admitted that against Brady and limited its application in the jury charge. Rerdell said they secured nearly 30 routes through association with Dorsey and a Mr. Bossler. The profits were divided. Brady required a petition as justifying orders for expedition if questioned. They were furnished whenever necessary by employing persons to get signatures or make up names themselves. Brady was to receive 30 or 40 per cent. of the expedition ordered, and as contracts were usually sublet and contractors heavily fined Brady secured another percentage even larger, witness thought, than for expedition. Rerdell said when summoned for examination by the congressional committee he feigned sickness for a few days.

Fate of the Internal Revenue Bill.

WASHINGTON, July 25.—The fate of the internal revenue bill yesterday so far as its passage by senate at the present session is concerned, will probably be settled to-day. The democrats and republicans seem to be sparring against each other, neither party caring a fig for the bill itself, but each is anxious to throw upon the other the responsibility for failure to reduce taxation. Democrats disclaim all idea of attempting to delay or defeat passage of the revenue bill. They say it is not a proper way to try to change it by offering amendments and discussing the tariff at length. Republicans insist that this programme is but a shallow subterfuge to cover intense hostility to the bill, and democrats do not propose to allow republicans to get credit for reducing taxes. Democratic senators held a conference yesterday and informally decided to support an amendment in the nature of a substitute for that clause of the bill that abolishes the 25 per cent. emergency tax on sugar. The democratic substitute provides horizontal scaling of all duties 20 per cent., 10 per cent. to take effect January 1, 1883, and 10 per cent. January 1, 1884. This amendment was afterwards introduced in the senate by Harris, of Tennessee. If this amendment is rejected then amendments of all kinds will be proposed and debated by democrats. If it is agreed to, then they will be willing to let the bill pass without other changes. If, however, Hale calls up the navy appropriation bill as he has signified he would do, the internal revenue bill will not be further considered this session, and congress will adjourn about August 1.

The President's Policy.

The president is said to have adopted a new rule which will soon result in placing only stalwarts in office. Where a stalwart's term expires he will reappoint him and when anti stalwarts' terms expire he will replace them with stalwarts. The truth of this is exactly apparent from the fact that there are 188 presidential offices in Pennsylvania, and the president has made appointments already for 75 of them, or about 40 per cent. In New York there are 2[illegible] presidential offices and the president has already made nominations to the number of 81. There have been 82 nominations to office in New York state, but three were successive nominations to one place, the Westport postoffice. Of the 2 collectors President Arthur has appointed 1[illegible] or 82 per cent., and all have either been known as pronounced stalwarts or procured their appointments through unmistakable stalwart influence. A prominent New York congressman says that it is entirely within bounds to say that 98 per cent. of all New Yorkers who have been appointed to office by the president are stalwarts. Examination of the list of the 83 nominations referred to above shows five of them are women in postoffices. Deducting these an examination of the list by the political test shows of the 77 remaining not less than 3[illegible], or 70 per cent., are either known as stalwarts or appointed through stalwart influence.

President Barrios' Movements.

Herald's Washington special: President Barrios left here this afternoon for Philadelphia. It is rumored this evening that during his visit here he and M. Rattoro the Mexican minister, came to an understanding by which Guatemala and Mexico agree to submit the long standing boundary dispute to the friendly arbitration of the president of the United States. By the convention which is said to have been signed by President Barrios and M. Rattoro it is understood that Guatemala gives up all claims to the disputed territories and the question is left to arbitration as to the exact boundary lines between Guatemala and the province of Soconusco, which line is still to be surveyed.

ALASKA AFFAIRS.

Government Land being Jumped—Much Sickness at Sitka—Complaint of Lack of Medical Attendance—Mining Matters, Etc.

SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE OREGONIAN.

PORT TOWNSEND, July 24.—By the U. S. mail steamer S. L. Mastick, arrived this morning, is received the following Alaskan news up to June 17th.

The example set by the missionary, Rev. John G. Brady, in jumping the government reserve at Sitka is having a very pernicious effect. Brady acted in open defiance of the authorities and the Russians are following suit, and under the impression that if Brady can fence in valuable government land in the center of the town they should have the same privilege, a piece of ground nearly south of where Brady has squatted has been jumped by a Russian creole, and the ex-missionary supplied him with material to fence it in.

After an absence of nearly six weeks the Wachusett dropped in Sitka on June 17th. A very rigid quarantine was enforced. After coaling she quietly sailed away for Wrangel on June 21st, taking both surgeons and leaving no medicine for the sick.

The marine corporal has recovered, but others of the guard have been attacked. Deaths among the Russian creoles from the plague, a combination of scarlet fever and measles, continue with unabated vigor, causing much destitution and want of the actual necessities of life and only a lack of material will cause a cessation. The mortality that exists among these unfortunate and helpless creatures is simply fearful. Much indignation is felt at the course pursued by Commander Pearson in not leaving a medical officer at Sitka. He was fully conversant with the situation and put his ship in close quarantine and sending his surgeons ashore to investigate the trouble. They reported the disease on the increase and one of the medical officers was desirous of remaining here and tendering services to the community, but Commander Pearson steamed away leaving his lieutenant of marines, the whole guard and the town to die of the contagion. For some reason this officer has conceived a violent dislike for Sitka and its inhabitants and on several occasions has given publicity to his feelings and opinions. Sometime since the collector made application for a surgeon of the marine hospital service and a favorable response was given [illegible] strives the greater part of the population will [illegible] A capital collection in this district are by no means small and are constantly increasing. THE WAR IN EGYPT.

British Troops Intrenching Themselves at Ramleh Heights.

A SLIGHT SKIRMISH WITH SLIGHT RESULTS

Several Atrocities Committed at Tantah and Other Portions of the Interior—Reserves Called Out

SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE OREGONIAN.

ALEXANDRIA, July 24.—The rebels are distributed as follows: One division in [illegible] two regiments in Cairo, two divisions at Kafr-el-Dwar, [illegible] in entry at Rosetta and 7000 at Damietta. Each division consists of four regiments of infantry of [illegible] men each, one regiment of artillery of 700 men and [illegible] guns. Fourth [illegible] Italians were taken from [illegible] works on the Nile to construct earthworks at Kafr-el-Dwar [illegible] battalion and batteries and [illegible] The British brought sixty prisoners from Ramleh to-day. The [illegible] entered [illegible] at Ramleh. The British [illegible] to-day.

ALEXANDRIA, July [illegible] 10 A. M.—Military authorities [illegible] that Arabi Pasha will [illegible] the [illegible] He is [illegible] strengthening his position [illegible] many of them without uniforms were driven like slaves.

British Preparations.

Men are working on entrenchments. The British experience great difficulty in moving guns, without which it is impossible to assume the offensive [illegible] As soon as sufficient [illegible] position an attempt will be made to dislodge Arabi Pasha without exposing the troops. Gunners and guns from the fleet are going to the front.

Egyptian War Notes.

British guns on Ramleh heights [illegible] command the neck of land and will cover the Egyptian portion.

One or two members here of a deputation representing the notables brought a copy of a proclamation secretly circulated by Ragheb Pasha stating that England had declared war against the Egyptians. The khedive has consequently been strongly advised to dismiss Ragheb Pasha from the ministry and place him under arrest. It is hoped also that as the ministers are mere creatures of Arabi Pasha the khedive will dismiss them all and form a new ministry under Cherif Pasha. The deputation after learning the true state of things here will try to return to Cairo and inform their colleagues of the facts.

The khedive has dispatched a vessel to Port Said to bring Cherif Pasha here.

LONDON, July 25.—The Daily News has the following: All mule cart drivers engaged by Commissariat have deserted to Arabi.

The khedive believes by liberal payment for their services, Bedouins might be secured to insure safety of the Suez canal.

The British consul informed the khedive England has recognized his present ministry and urged him to appoint a successor to Arabi Pasha. Nubar [illegible] the two present ministers are in daily communication with Arabi.

To-day's skirmish left both parties without any change in their position since last report and both are engaged in entrenching.

The English will permanently hold Ramleh Hill [illegible] and put heavy guns there.

Egyptians are working desperately to entrench their side of the narrow pass between the lakes near Eastie.

The Egyptian projectiles burst too high to do any damage during the skirmish to-day. In consequence of this fact British escaped heavy loss. Egyptians advanced boldly but without judgment as they might easily have captured all mounted infantry.

There is an unconfirmed report here of a fanatical outbreak at Smyrna, in which many Christians were massacred.

Egyptian Atrocities.

ALEXANDRIA, July 24.—An Italian refugee says he saw 85 European bodies lying in the streets of Tantah and that infants were being flung at windows and about the streets. Greeks' throats were hacked with a penknife and two English women were killed. Arabi Pasha put on a train to carry away Christian survivors and about one hundred persons boarded, but no sooner were they seated than another attempt was made to murder them and was only frustrated by friendly natives causing the train to start.

Tales of Atrocities at Tantah.

ALEXANDRIA, July 25.—The inspector of Cas-lastro at Tantah, speaking of the massacre, says: I saw women carrying, tied to bludgeons, the dismembered arms and legs of massacred Europeans. The soldiers and rabble fought for loot. A Bedouin sheik with twenty Bedouins saved inhabitants of the Jewish quarter and took them to his village. Another sheik saved myself and party. A mob from Alexandria murdered three employes of Casdaira and their families and burned their bodies with petroleum. The mob killed twelve Greeks. They tied the viscera of one of the victims to the tail of a dog and covered him with petroleum, which was set on fire amidst cries of woe from women and children. The mob was repulsed eight times and finally two sheiks arrived and dispersed it.

Arabi Pasha and Suez Canal.

PARIS, July 24.—In the deputies to-day the minister of marine moved a credit of 9,000,000 francs for protection of the Suez canal. De Lesseps telegraphed Arabi Pasha has declared his determination to respect its neutrality.

Notes from the Front.

ALEXANDRIA, July 25.—The out posts of Arabi Pasha have retired about 1000 yards and the British advanced about 500 yards. There appears to be some disturbance in Arabi's intrenchments.

French Intentions.

PARIS, July 25.—De Freycinet in replying to a question stated French operations for protection of the canal would not include an expedition to Cairo to ensure safety of a fresh water supply.

The Squadron at Alexandria.

ALEXANDRIA, July 25.—There are now here 10 English, 2 Austrian, 1 American, 1 German, 1 Russian, 1 Greek and 3 Italian men-of-war. A Turkish corvette arrived to-day.

Spain will Send Vessels to Egypt.

MADRID, July 25.—Government has decided to dispatch three additional frigates to Egypt, one to be stationed at Port Said, another at Suez and a third at Ismailia.

Reserves Called Out.

CORK, July 25.—A proclamation was posted tonight calling out the first class army reserve to assemble before the 2d of August.

Guards for Cyprus.

LONDON, July 25.—It is understood a brigade of Guards will proceed to Cyprus, where it will be held in reserve.

The Porte Participates.

CONSTANTINOPLE, July 25.—The first meeting of the conference in which the porte participated was held to-day.

ABERDEEN, July 25.—The reserves of the Gordon highlanders are ordered to join their colors.

FIRES.

At Minneapolis.

MINNEAPOLIS, July 25.—About 6 o'clock this evening an incendiary fire broke out in the lumber yards of the Minneapolis Mill Company of this city and is still burning. So far three million feet of lumber have burned. Loss about $50,000. Insurance $10,000. A portion of the burned lumber was piled in close proximity to the gas works and as an explosion was imminent, the gas was turned into the river about [illegible] o'clock, leaving the city in darkness. The fire is believed to be under control.

At Grand Haven, Mich.

GRAND HAVEN, July 25.—A small house burned this morning. Mrs. N. Baker and Mrs. Anderson [illegible] suffocated. A two year old child was saved by being thrown from a window. Mr. Baker and son are working in Illinois.

At Grand Rapids, Mich.

GRAND RAPIDS, July 25.—A fire here this evening destroyed six million feet of lumber owned by the Michigan barrel company, burned six dwellings and [illegible] several others. Total loss estimated at $100,000. Insurance unknown.

A View of the Iowa Amendment, Its Victims and [illegible] in the Legislature and Courts, Its Political Origin and Significance

A temperance journalist who has [illegible] the St. Paul [illegible] [illegible] amendment [illegible]

[illegible] first [illegible] the amendment was [illegible] party platform at a political convention. [illegible] and religious was [illegible] through the [illegible] of the legislature by political [illegible] backed by pulpit, denominations and the rural press. Then three different interpretations were put upon it by the leading papers in the state. Some claimed that it favored whisky and [illegible] against beer and the distillers and brewers began to pull apart with [illegible] the word beverage was in [illegible] the amendment and it all [illegible] the campaign. Other papers now claimed that it prohibited both whisky and beer as a [illegible] punctuation point might [illegible] If a comma were placed after the word sale, it favored the brewer. If the comma were omitted and a semicolon placed after the word manufacture it favored the distiller, so if nature had taken charge of the amendment instead of providence as the temperance so notice claimed,

ATTENDING [illegible]

might have dropped upon the Bautlings and taken the temperance all out of it at a single sitting, before the yeas and nays were called. A second session of the assembly voted [illegible] the amendment to a vote of the people at a special election when Mr. B. F. White [illegible] city, the author of the amendment, sent [illegible] the original copy of the manuscript [illegible] punctuation points at all. [illegible] sea again and but few leading papers in as many leading cities came out boldly in favor of the amendment. The country press which in Iowa is [illegible] the echo of metropolitan thunder contented itself [illegible] with communications on both sides and in a majority of instances was neither for or against. Meantime the opposing armies were organizing for the fray. The Distillers, Brewers and Liquor Dealers associations called for tribute from the saloons and a vast campaign fund was secured. The women, churches, Sabbath schools and children massed their forces, and established papers and procured speakers and funds. While the guns were loading, and the camp fires burning on every hill in the commonwealth the heralds of the Atlas distillery company arrived at Des Moines from New York. They had a vast amount of capital and experience to invest in Des Moines or rather in a distillery in the state capital. Hon. W. H. Merritt, the mayor, met them and presented them to the board of trade. Iowa was "a great corn state," said the wily capitalists, "and your farmers ought to have a home market. We will put up a large distillery here, resilience for our ourselves and give employment to a large number of workmen and make a home market for the Iowa farmers' corn." His honor listened to the tempter, the board of trade pulled down its vest, and the governor himself smiled as he gave Col. Bayliss and the "Atlas company" copies of his campaign speech on the resources of "our great state." Des Moines has been trying for some time to absorb the state institutions. The home for feeble minded children at Glenwood, the asylum for the deaf and dumb at Council Bluffs, being among the special objects of her paternal regard, on account of the big steals that are said to accompany legislative appropriations. It was not a desire for high wines, but public spirit and state pride, therefore, that induced her politicians and temperance people to meet the great gin shop half way. Col. Bayliss, a shrewd business man, fancied that the amendment might interfere and suggested the same to the board of trade, through his honor the mayor. Mr. Merritt then invited Judge Maxwell, Elder Lucas and other midwives who

ATTENDED THE AMENDMENT AT ITS BIRTH

To meet the capitalists before the board of trade and satisfy them that the proposed amendment would not interfere with the investment of distillery capital at Des Moines. It was then and there that the word "beverage" came up from plain nonpareil into small italics, and the punctuation points placed where they would do the most good. The Atlas Distillery Company bowed its thanks and went straightway to the erection of the largest distillery in the United States. The politicians, brewers and other distillers were then consulted and a compromise effected to the end that the politicians would arrange with the senate at the next session, to place the same construction upon the amendment that the prohibitionists had given it before the board of trade, punctuation points and all. Thus it was, that the very men in the senate who had voted to submit the proposed measure to a vote of the people inserted a weak clause in their official construction of its meaning, in the interest of the distiller and against the brewer and the saloon. This was, that the amendment shall "prohibit the manufacture and sale of all intoxicating liquors as a beverage in Iowa, including ale, wine and beer, but for no other purposes." In other words the "damnable stuff" can be made in any quantity for export, provided the manufacturer and dealer can show that it is not made and sold for use as a beverage. The benighted heathen of Illinois, Minnesota, Missouri, Dakota and Nebraska may degrade and debauch themselves on Iowa whisky while Iowa pockets the cash profits in the name of temperance, humanity and reform. The construction, as given above, passed the Iowa senate on the 19th day of last March by a vote of 31 to 16. The beer is made in this state chiefly for use as a "beverage," the brewers felt that the amendment was especially hard on their business and largely in favor of the distillers. The brewers therefore massed their forces, secured a large fund, threatened to withdraw their strength from the republican party and fought the amendment with all the resources at their command. The distillers on the other hand sent large sums of money quietly into the temperance exchequer and smiled as their agents distributed prohibition tracts. The democrats saw in the fanatical craze an opportunity either to commit an other periodical blunder or score a point. They supported the amendment heartily between drinks, all over the state, and deposited the white ballot on the 27th of June. Their object was to divide the republican party on saddle prohibition upon it as a future issue. These were some of the influences that sent the measure through the polls with a majority of [illegible] and many good people are still

THANKING GOD

That the evil is about to be banished from the state. It was not cowardice that made men hesitate on that autumn Tuesday, for thousands of thoughtful citizens knew that the temperance people have had the liquor traffic by the throat in this state for thirty years. A democratic legislature passed a severe prohibitory law in 1851. In 1857 a republican legislature inserted what is known as the "wine and beer clause," excepting wine and beer from the penalties of the law. No attempt has ever been made to enforce this law, and no law can be enacted under the amendment as severe in its prohibitive measures as the present law. This law if rigidly enforced, would accomplish all that the amendment is expected to do. The present law is local option allowing each community to regulate its own affairs as to ale, wine and beer. Under the present law this stuff could be voted out of all towns and cities in Iowa excepting probably thirty, and in these thirty the amendment or any prohibitory measure would be openly violated or circumvented by surreptitious means. The adoption of the amendment will stop the selling of beer in all small towns and villages, but in [illegible] towns and villages the same saloons could have been closed by the resident voters at any and every spring election. The adoption of the amendment will close the public or licensed drinking places in towns of 5000 inhabitants, and customers will supply themselves by evasive methods, now so common and so clever in Kansas and Maine. This engenders hypocrisy and a contempt for all law. But in any city of 5000 and upwards will drinking cease, or even be lessened. And yet, as the amendment was carried last Tuesday, mainly by the country vote, its enforcement rests with the towns, one half of which are opposed to such enforcement. In other words, whenever the amendment is to be enforced the present law could put all liquors out, and where the present law cannot be enforced the amendment will have no effect unless one half of the voters [illegible]

CONCLUDING REFLECTIONS

It was a question with others as to what the result would be after the enthusiasm and excitement of the present dies away. Temperance spasms cannot be kept up perpetually, for American human nature is fickle and impulsive. Even emotional religion is proper recovering from a revival spasm have to be converted over again every winter. Hundreds of men voted for the amendment in a half hearted way, who will do little towards its enforcement. The measure will be a dead letter therefore in more than half of the state as in the case with similar measures in Kansas and Maine.

Again thousands of conservative, liberal minded men voted for the amendment because they did not want to array themselves against the churches, the Sabbath schools, the women and children, with a [illegible] hope [illegible] and hoped for the best. This large class believed firmly that prohibition of the [illegible] will succeed only in [illegible] while [illegible] whisky and beer will be practically [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] [illegible] that all [illegible] [illegible] to [illegible] the real disease. This cannot [illegible] the [illegible] If the Iowa struggle the issue was not [illegible] but simply whisky and beer. There is not a breath of temperance in the amendment nor was there a grain of temperance applied to it in any part of the campaign. The amendment simply prohibits the manufacture or sale or the keeping [illegible] intoxicating liquors as a beverage [illegible] for medicinal, mechanical and [illegible] will go on as usual if they only show the average [illegible] that their stuff is made for export [illegible] mechanical, medicinal and sacramental purposes and not to be used as a beverage.

The desire for stimulus lies deeper than the [illegible] the saloon is the [illegible] and not the cause. [illegible] directed at symptoms instead of the evil itself are worse than useless. Law directed against the supply will always fail while appetite, habit and human nature remain. These paragraphs [illegible] you [illegible] foolish impression that I was [illegible] carried for temperance on amendment day. It was simply a confession that a strict prohibitory law upon Iowa statute books for many years could not be enforced for lack of a sustaining public sentiment; therefore it must be embodied in the organic law for the purpose of securing stronger restrictions. It was a scheme to drive the foreign vote from the republican party, divide the dominant party and prepare the way for democratic rule. It will appear by citations that the writer has good reason to defend the cause of practical temperance from moral and immoral assassins of all grades. He has his profession and gave nearly three years of gratuitous service as an active worker in the cause. His gifted boy was known as the Boy Orator of the Northwest and father and son originated the first temperance movement among boys and girls. Children were instructed and organized under the system in five states, when the little helper was killed by the cars. The father remains to protest against the visionary and revolutionary schemes that seek [illegible] under the name of temperance reform [illegible] plead for the American child. The temperance movement of the future must begin all over again with the boys and girls of to-day.

CONGRESSIONAL PROCEEDINGS.

Senate

WASHINGTON, July 25.

The conference on the river and harbor bill reduced the Hennepin canal item from $[illegible] to $30,000, the Delaware and Chesapeake from $20,000 to $10,000 and a provision was added in each case that government shall not be committed to finish these canals. The Potomac flats appropriation was reduced from $500,000 to $400,000. For the Mississippi below Cairo from $5,000,000 to $[illegible],000, the amount fixed by the house, and work is to be prosecuted by the Mississippi river commission instead of by the secretary of war.

Conference on river and harbor bill was adopted and revenue bill proceeded with.

Logan favored the rebate inasmuch as the tax has been reduced. He had opposed reduction in the belief that the dealer alone would be benefited by it. He warned the democratic side that every step taken to reduce the taxes upon tobacco, whisky and beer would have the effect of strengthening the tariff protectionists and they were playing into the hands of their opponents on that issue.

Vance asked from what sources would the supply of necessary revenue come if all internal taxes were repealed.

Logan said he thought the question would be more pertinent if the gentleman addressed it to himself as he was one of those who favored taking the taxes off.

Vance said he could answer for himself. He would lower the tariff to a point at which it will yield enough revenue to support the government. Logan replied that co-operation of the gentleman's political associates would be necessary to carrying out his proposition and in view of disagreements of his party on the subject it was very doubtful whether these could be secured. Being further interrogated on the tariff by Morgan and Vance, Logan said that democrats when in control of the house made but one attempt to reduce internal taxes and that was in favor of chills and fever. They lowered the duty on quinine and the price of the article immediately increased.

Morgan suggested modification of the pending amendment allowing payment of rebate to manufacturers in purchases of stamps at a reduced rate adopted.

Mahone's amendment was then agreed to, yeas 27, nays 25.

Following is the vote: Yeas—Brown, Butler, Call, Cameron of Pennsylvania, Davis of Illinois, Dawes, Farley, Hampton, Hoar, Ingalls, Jonas, Jones of Florida, Kellogg of Louisiana, McDill, Mahone, Miller of California, Morgan, Pendleton, Pugh, Ransom, Sewall, Vance, Vest, Voorhees, Walker and Williams—27.

Nays—Allison, Beck, Blair, Camden, Chilcott, Cockrell, Coke, Conger, Ferry, Frye, George, Gorman, Hale, Harris, Hawley, Hill of Colorado, Jackson, McMillan, Maxey, Mitchell, Morrill, Robbins, Sawyer, Sherman and Windom—25.

The vote was not strictly a party one. Cameron of Pennsylvania, Kellogg and Mahone, were the only republicans voting aye. The republican negative was strengthened by Bayard, Camden, Coke, George, Hampton, Harris, Jackson, Jones of Florida, Maxey, Pendleton, Saulsbury, Slater and Harris of Illinois.

The question next recurred upon committee amendment to the tobacco section, striking out the clause allowing rebate to reduction on all stocks on hand at the time the law takes effect. Mahone moved to amend the amendment by inserting in lieu of the provision proposed to be stricken out the following: Provided that on all original and unbroken factory packages of such articles as cigars and cigarettes, including smoking and manufactured tobacco held by manufacturers or dealers at the time such reduction shall go into effect, upon which tax has been paid, there shall be allowed a drawback or rebate of the full amount of reduction, provided the same shall not apply in any case where a claim has not been ascertained or presented within 30 days following the date of reduction.

Allison opposed the amendment.

The section further perfected was adopted. It provides that after October 1, 1882, manufacturers shall pay $4 per thousand on cigars of all descriptions, 75 cents per thousand on cigarettes weighing three pounds or less per thousand, on cigarettes weighing over three pounds per thousand $1. The section further provides for a dealer's drawback to the full amount of reduction on all unbroken packages of manufactured tobacco, snuff, cigars and cigarettes on hand at the time the reduction goes into effect, which reduction may be paid in stamps at reduced rates.

The fifth section in relation to sugar duties was read and Hale moved to strike out the requirement for test of saccharine strength of sugars by the polarizing process. After remarks by Sherman in opposition, senate, without disposing of the subject, adjourned.

House.

Cannon of Illinois submitted the conference report on the legislative and judicial appropriation bill. The report announces agreement on all items of the bill except transfer of the records in the surgeon general's office to that of the adjutant general. As the bill originally passed the house it appropriated $19,880,21[illegible]; as it passed the senate it appropriated $[illegible]; as agreed upon by the conference committee it now appropriates $20,[illegible]8 00.

Conference was ordered on the following bills:

By Anderson of Kansas to collect from the Kansas Pacific railroad the cost of surveying, selecting and conveying certain lands.

By Knott, of Kentucky, declaring forfeited to the United States certain lands granted the Northern Pacific Railroad Company and remaining unpatented on the 1st of July, 1882; also a joint resolution requesting the president to see that no patents shall be issued the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company for any lands remaining unpatented on the 1st of July, 1882, or until congress shall have acted on the foregoing bill.

By Dingley fixing the duty on imported hay at 20 per cent. ad valorem; also a joint resolution for the appointment of four senators and sixteen representatives to investigate the conditions and wants of American shipping interests, and report at the next session of congress.

By Flower of New York proposing a constitutional amendment granting the president the right to veto [illegible] items [illegible] while approving other items.

By Atkins of Tennessee, to protect the treasury. It provides that no claim or account against the United States shall be allowed by accounting officers of the treasury unless filed within six years from the passage of this act or within six years from the time such claim or account accrued.

By Clark to make bills of lading negotiable.

District of Columbia business having been taken up and an attempt to repeal license tax on commercial travelers failing under rules, house adjourned.

WASHINGTON, July 26.

Miller of Pennsylvania made an answer to the recent attack of Senator Butler. His remarks elicited applause from the republican side.

Speaker announced the regular order was Kelley's motion to recommit the bill allowing a drawback upon imported material used in [illegible] with domestic materials in construction of vessels for foreign [illegible]

Congressional Notes.

The minority of the house judiciary committee endeavored unsuccessfully to-day through Knott of Kentucky to have placed on the calendar the resolution introduced by [illegible] forfeited to the United States and [illegible] for settlement all lands granted to the Northern Pacific railroad by the act of 1864 which remained unpatented the 1st of July, 1882. Failing in this Knott introduced a resolution declaring such lands unearned and requiring the president to see that no patents are issued for any of these lands until [illegible] declaring them forfeited [illegible]

Minister Young and Consul Denny

[illegible] A special from New York says: [illegible] from Hongkong under date of June [illegible] intimate that an intrigue has been put into existence to oust General John Russell Young, on his arrival in China as the United States minister, that the friends of Mr. Denny, United States consul at Shanghai, [illegible] Grant had promised him the Peking mission [illegible] Chang [illegible] A reporter called at Grant's office this morning to ascertain the truth of the report. The general was not in [illegible] position qualifies him to speak with authority, said the story was perfectly absurd. Denny was a friend of Grant and when the general was in China he was simply a private citizen on his travels. He would have made no such promise even if he had been president and certainly could not in the position he was then filling. The general's friend could hardly believe the story had emanated from any responsible source. He did not believe Mr. Young would be estranged any more than any other American or representative of a foreign country. He thought the story purely sensational.

The Chinese Minister on the Treaty.

NEW YORK, July [illegible].—The newly arrived Chinese ambassador when asked for an opinion as to the right of Chinese to go through this country on their way to China replied that he feared a strict interpretation of the act would not give them this privilege. He had called the attention of President Arthur to the matter when the twenty years act was under consideration by congress and he entered a protest against it. The most friendly feeling toward the United States existed in China, which he believed was reciprocated here and he did not think that we would permit this injustice to prevail. He hoped that congress would find the way out of the difficulty. The matter was serious and demanded careful attention. The ambassador will leave for Washington this morning.

A Bloodless Duel.

CHRISTIANSBURG, Va., July 25.—Capt. John S. Wise, readjuster candidate for congressman at large, and John S. Crockett, commonwealth's attorney of Wythe county, came to this place on an early train this morning and fought a duel near here with pistols. At the first round both fired at the word without effect. At the second round Crockett's pistol went off prematurely and after reloading the weapon both combatants placed themselves in position for another round. Wise's pistol missed fire and Crockett's fire was harmless. Crockett, the challenging party, then expressed himself satisfied and the fight terminated.

The meeting had its origin in a personal encounter which took place Monday the 17th inst., when Captain Wise met Crockett and interrogated him about certain language which Crockett attributed to Wise. Crockett acknowledged he made the statement and said it was true. Wise denounced it as false and struck Crockett. Before the latter could resent the blow outsiders intervened and both were arrested and fined for breach of the peace. This caused the subsequent correspondence which resulted in the duel. No arrests.

Strike at South Chicago.

CHICAGO, July 25.—Iron ore unloaders at South Chicago have struck, and scenes of the Joliet strike, which was long and brutal, are likely to be repeated unless a compromise is effected. The necessity for men is more pressing now than last spring. A number of stevedores of several lake lines are striking and dock troubles multiply.

The Jonesboro Bank Failure.

A special says, Willard's failure and flight from his bank in Jonesboro, Illinois, grows hourly a more desperate affair. It looks now as though shortage would be $200,000, and assets practically nothing. Willard's whereabouts are kept very secret. The general opinion is that he lost nothing by speculation, but that it's an out and out robbery. Some suspicion is directed against the family on account of acts of doubtful propriety done since the disappearance.

Probable Murder.

MERIDEN, Miss., July 25.—This morning two miles south of Desoto on the Mobile and Ohio railroad the mangled remains of six negroes were found on the track, having been run over by a train. They were employed on the New Orleans and Northeastern railroad, and had just been paid off and were bound home. One negro has been arrested and another is being hunted upon strong suspicion of having murdered and robbed the men and placed their bodies on the track.

A Filthy Affair.

KENOSHA, Wis., July 25.—A wealthy and reputable woman of Evanston who had an uncontrollable appetite for drink was made drunk by a gang of loafers recently, taken to the woods near the city and repeatedly outraged by them. The affair coming to the knowledge of officers the woman was secured in a fainting, besotted condition and taken half dead to a place of safety. Several of the parties are arrested and others will be.

A Blackleg Shot.

CRAWFORD, Mo., July 25.—A member of a notorious gang of thieves and blacklegs in Howard county was shot dead to-day by a posse trying to arrest him and whom he resisted. It is feared his comrades will avenge his death and that a series of bloody tragedies will follow.

Killed His Wife.

LINCOLN, Neb., July 25.—On Sunday night Wm. H. Reid, a farmer in Gage county, shot and instantly killed his wife, who had sought refuge from his brutality with her son-in-law. The murderer is in jail at Beatrice.

Gambling Cases Ended.

ST. LOUIS, July 25.—All cases against gamblers, lotterymen and kindred frauds, are nolle prosequied or deferred till the September term, when they will be dropped. This ends the fight against that species of crime here.

Pattison Accepts.

PHILADELPHIA, July 25.—Robert E. Pattison has addressed a letter to the chairman of the committee of the democratic state convention appointed to notify him of his nomination for governor accepting the nomination.

Political Notes.

SPRINGFIELD, O., July 25.—The congressional canvass in this district is considered virtually in favor of Speaker Keifer.

PORTLAND, Me., July 25.—The independent republican conference to-day adopted a call for a new convention.

A Protest.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., July 25.—The tobacco board of trade has sent a letter to Congressman Black protesting against the amendment to the revenue bill allowing growers to sell tobacco to the value of one hundred dollars free of tax.

Refugees for Kansas.

CINCINNATI, O., July 25.—Arrangements have been completed for sending about fifty of the Russian refugees recently arrived here to form a farming colony in Kansas.

Sullivan and Tug Wilson to Fight again.

NEW YORK, July 25.—Sullivan and Tug Wilson have signed articles for another prize fight on the same terms as the first, to take place Aug. 15th.

BY ATLANTIC CABLE.

Parliamentary Proceedings.

LONDON, July 25.—In the commons this afternoon the speaker read a message from the queen announcing the calling out of reserves in consequence of the troubles in Egypt. Gladstone moved that the message be considered to-morrow. A number of reserves have left this morning to join regiments ordered to Egypt.

The Hillsdale Crew.

LONDON, July 25.—Capt. Terwilliger of the Hillsdale crew has written the captain of the Thames rowing club as follows: "The Thames crew being winner in the race for senior four oared shells at the metropolitan regatta I hereby challenge the same to row an international race between Putney and Mortlake on the Thames, and I suggest the 4th of August as the day of the race." The secretary of the Amateur rowing association has requested his correspondents in the United States to send their answers in regard to the status of the Hillsdale crew by cable.

Death of Minister Marsh.

ROME, July 25.—George P. Marsh, American minister to Italy, died [illegible] at Vallambrosa. [George Perkins Marsh was born at Woodstock, Vermont, March 27, 1801. Graduated at Dartmouth college in 1820. He commenced practice of law and settled at Burlington, Vermont. Was member of the state legislature in 1835, member of United States congress for several years, and minister to Turkey in 1849. In 1861 he was appointed minister to Italy, which post he has held ever since, and at the time of his death was senior member of the diplomatic force of the United States. He has also considerable reputation as author of various essays and volumes relating to scientific and historical subjects.]

A Dynamite Party in Spain.

MADRID, July 25.—A small box which was sent from Granada [illegible] Senor Sagasta, prime minister, on being examined was found to contain nitro glycerine. Several persons have been arrested in suspicion.

Russian Accidents.

VIENNA, July 25.—Three hundred houses and some large warehouses were destroyed by fire at Radzi[illegible] [illegible] Russia and 800 people rendered homeless. The Russian steamer Moscow was sunk by a boiler explosion and 200 men lost.

Fatal Row in Austria.

WEDNESDAY MORNING. JULY 26, 1882.

LICENSE AND TEMPERANCE REFORM.

Senator Logan's admirable scheme to make the whisky tax available for the support of common schools, has, strangely, met with most serious opposition from the friends of temperance and education. Their opposition is one of those singular instances of narrow-mindedness sometimes resulting from excess of zeal. That many practical temperance men take the other and right view of the matter relieves the whole class from the reproach of stupidity. A minister belonging to the protestors, writes us that he cannot understand "how anyone can be a Christian and countenance the liquor traffic." He argues that "the state by license encourages the whisky business," and expresses the conviction that "it would be better to remove all restraints and let the evil kill itself." It is greatly to be regretted that workers in a good cause, like that of temperance, seem to be constitutionally unable to take a practical view of things. Our critic, for instance, does not hesitate to obtrude a theory which is in flat contradiction with experience. Free whisky is an evil which does not contain within itself the element of reform. The cheaper it is made the more is it consumed, and the more it is consumed the worse are the consequences. Why do this gentleman and his co-workers ignore the plain lessons of experience. A great many years ago the people of Ohio incorporated in their constitution a provision that the sale of liquors should not be licensed. Either they thought that whisky could not be sold without a license or they believed, as our correspondent seems to believe, that if not countenanced by government, the traffic would die out and the appetite for stimulants would subside. Some thirty years of trial under such a law served to demonstrate that the theory was fallacious. Temperance movements of all kinds were inaugurated from time to time in order to supplement the no license system, but they were all in vain; the number of saloons continued to increase as well as the numbers of drinkers and the amount of liquor consumed. Finally, when the people were ready to acknowledge the error which had been made and elected a legislature to pass a repressive measure in the shape of heavy taxation and special police regulations, it was found that the ill-considered constitutional provision blocked the way, and the Ohio people must now wait till an amendment to the organic law of the state can be submitted and adopted.

The question occurs whether any man who assumes to be a teacher in religion, morals, and temperance has the right to ignore or suppress facts in order to gain favor for some hypothesis of his own. The experience of numerous communities and many generations teaches that the evil of intemperance will not kill itself if all restraint be removed. A man who advances so illogical a position at this late day assumes a serious responsibility. Nor can he justify his expression of amazement that any man can be a Christian and consent to countenance the whisky traffic. There are just as good Christians as our correspondent, with greater discernment and more practical ideas of reform, who do not close their eyes to the actual events of life. They know that taxation and an adequate license system, accompanied by proper police inspection, reduce the number of dramshops, protect minors from the moral and physical corruption of early drinking, and help in a variety of ways to restrain the vice of intemperance. The same practical reformers recognize the spread of education as the most effective of all agencies in the work of sobriety and good citizenship. What theory of charity warrants the insinuation that such persons are not Christians, or what principle of logic teaches that free whisky is a surer cure for intemperance than universal education?

Men like our correspondent are behind the times. They have gained no wisdom from experience, and ignorantly and perversely they are constantly impeding the progress of practical temperance reform.

NEW YORK POLITICS.

The Commercial Advertiser thinks that with Cornell for their candidate, "with harmony on a proper basis," and "with John Kelly's candidate in the field," New York republicans "are sure to carry the state and secure their expected proportion of congressmen." But the Graphic thinks otherwise. It says: "the political mills throughout the state of New York are now running very busily, although quietly. The opinion is general that Gov. Cornell will succeed in compelling the republican convention to renominate him, and there is an equally widespread belief that this nomination will be followed by the defeat of the republican party at the polls. The next governor of the state of New York is almost sure to be a democrat, and the list of candidates who are either preparing for the contest, or whose friends are promoting their interests is already quite large." Which of these journals is the better authority as regards New York politics we are unable to say. The Graphic is of the opinion that Judge Homer A. Nelson stands the best chance of being the democratic candidate for governor. Mr. Nelson has been in his time a county judge, a member of congress, secretary of state and a member of the New York constitutional commission. He re-entered public life last year, when he was elected to the state senate, winning the Dutchess, Columbia and Putnam districts from the republicans.

PROGRESS AT THE SOUTH.

It is reported that the cotton crop has not been in a more favorable condition at a corresponding season for many years than now. If the season remains favorable, the crop may greatly exceed anything which would have been predicted during the great southern floods of last spring, but it is not likely to be much more than 5,000,000 bales, and it may be much less. Yet the south has the promise of a prosperous year. The planters have at last discovered that it is best to cultivate other crops than cotton. The old state of Georgia is said to have far more growing corn in her fields than was ever seen there before, and most other southern states have a greater variety of crops than usual. Mr. Edward Atkinson expresses the opinion that the change is chiefly the result of the dissemination of new ideas at the Atlanta cotton exposition. He thinks that put influences in operation which have opened a new era of enterprise for the south. It will be universally gratifying to have confirmations of this opinion from time to time. When the spirit of enterprise takes possession of the south there will be a period of rapid growth there such as has hardly been surpassed in the west itself.

Of course any newspaper that had even the smallest regard for truth and accuracy—the first essential of reputable and successful journalism—would not profess to have found in THE OREGONIAN, as the contemptible Standard says it has done, the statement that there is no person in Oregon fit to be superintendent of the asylum for the insane. Nothing that could be construed or tortured into such statement has ever appeared in these columns. What follows in the contemptible Standard is quite in keeping with the above gratuitous falsehood. It professes to see in the remarks made by this paper on the importance of selecting a suitable person for the superintendency something which "only shows too plainly that the editor of THE OREGONIAN has found some one whom he wants to foist on the state." Here is an evidence of littleness and stupidity quite in keeping with the source from which it emanates. THE OREGONIAN has no particular person in view for any position. It has nothing in view except what belongs strictly to the business of legitimate journalism. From no person whatever has it received any communication or suggestion in regard to the superintendency. But it hears of an effort to have the appointment controlled through political and partisan considerations, and it protests as it ought to do. Only a low-minded beggar for official spoon meat, who has come to the pass of looking upon humble and parasitic dependence upon persons in official place as the object in life most to be desired, could entertain the idea that no one could or would manifest an interest in any matter connected with administration of public affairs unless he wanted to "foist" some particular person into place in expectation of being advanced himself to the honorable position of a crumb-picker. No newspaper of any account pays the least attention to those considerations which the Standard deems so powerful, except to spurn them. But that paper for so long a time found crumbs about the asylum that what it says just now is most easily accounted for. But it may quiet its fears. No respectable newspaper wants the pauper's place it is so jealous to maintain.

Science is growing more and more secure, not only through its fresh achievements but through the rediscovery of old lost arts. The art of fusing gold and other metals with fine pottery or glass had been lost for two thousand years, till it was recently rediscovered by D. Farrell of Brooklyn. It was one of the embellishments of ancient Egypt; and when the land of the Pharaohs decayed, the secret of the fusing of gold and silver into colored mosaics and vases was lost. The Venetians, in the sixteenth century, made an attempt to restore it, but their work was very imperfect. It was reserved for a Brooklyn man to unearth a secret which had long lain buried in the tomb of Egypt. Scientific men have examined his work and pronounce it genuine. Mr. Farrell has been working at the problem of metal and glass fusion for several years, and in the course of his experiments and failures he is said to have made several discoveries of ornamental value in glass working.

The English "jingoes" are looking over Gladstone's past speeches and quoting from them in connection with his present action in Egypt. "The principle," said the premier four years ago, "that a country has the right to regulate the affairs of neighboring countries for its own convenience is a lawless and revolutionary principle. No doctrine more thoroughly and intensely evil was ever hatched within the precincts of a commune." Arabi Pasha no doubt thoroughly agrees with him; but if Mr. Gladstone still agrees with himself, asks the London Standard (tory organ) why is the English fleet at Alexandria, and "what are Englishmen doing or trying to do in Egypt at all?" The conservative cackle, however, will not affect the fact that the whiff of gunpowder at Alexandria has given the premier a new lease of life.

Agents of the old Pacific railway monopoly are unceasing in their efforts to prevent the completion of the northern road. Fortunately, however, they make no progress. The defeat on yesterday of the endeavor to have the minority report of the judiciary committee, declaring the Northern Pacific land grant forfeited, advanced to a place on the calendar of the house, was a decided victory for the great road of the northwest. Stocks of the company, both common and preferred, are strong. The former sold yesterday at 50 and the latter at 90. Evidently there is growing confidence that the assaults on the enterprise will fail. For the whole northwest there could be no more hopeful news.

We learn that a wrong impression prevails among packers and fishermen at Astoria in regard to THE OREGONIAN'S suggestions as to fishing on the bar. It was not intended to say that fishing should be prohibited on the broad expanse extending some miles below Astoria. Points of limit were named by way of illustration, merely. We have no doubt that the government engineers, representing the interests of commerce, and the packers representing the fishery interest, could amicably fix the limits.

The St. Paul Dispatch is enthusiastic over the prospect of the completion of the Northern Pacific railroad. In its issue of July 6 it says: "Unless some unanticipated disaster interferes with the plans of Mr. Villard and his associates, a year from to-day the state of Minnesota and the territory of Washington will be united by completion of the Northern Pacific main line." The Dispatch then proceeds with a strong argument in favor of the admission of Washington as a state.

READ THE FOLLOWING ENDORSEMENTS!

Portland, Or., July 6, 1882.

We, the undersigned, representing the different fire insurance companies doing business in this city, witnessed a trial on Saturday evening, June the 24th, by Mr. D. M. Dunne, of the firm of Messrs. KELLY, DUNNE & CO., on a section of shingled roof, painted with two coats of THE CALIFORNIA FIRE AND WATERPROOF PAINT CO'S PAINT. The roof was subjected to a strong fire, composed of dry kindlings saturated with coal oil, for TWENTY MINUTES. On clearing away the fire, the shingles were only charred. We strongly recommend it for shingled roofs, as we are satisfied that any roof painted with it will not catch fire from brands or any ordinary fire exposure.

The Daily Oregonian.

WEDNESDAY MORNING, JULY 26, 1882.

OREGONIAN AT THE RESORTS.—Parties can have THE DAILY OREGONIAN sent to them at any of the seaside resorts, at $1 per month, on leaving their address at the business office of this paper.

CITY.

[illegible] MAIL SERVICE.—The last mail which reached this office by the Roseburg route [illegible] pounds. This is one day's mail only, and taking into consideration the fact that [illegible] miles of its journey is made by stage, it is an achievement worthy of note. Making mention of this matter the Yreka Journal says: "The extraordinary amount of mail matter now coming for Oregon and Washington and Idaho territories, loads the stage every trip with 150 to 500 pounds, in addition to passengers, express and baggage, the mail having the precedence of everything. There never has been such an extensive quantity of mail since the old California stage company's days, when old Joe [illegible] used to load a stage every trip with [illegible] documents under the freedom of the franking privilege."

RETURNED.—Mr. M. O. Lownsdale dropped into THE OREGONIAN editorial rooms yesterday. He arrived on the Oregon unannounced, having boarded the steamer too late to get his name in the passenger list. With mustaches and short burnsides, which hide half of his hitherto smoothly shaved face, and a cutaway suit in latest Broadway style, he presents the appearance of a rich young merchant, and his best known acquaintances passed him on the streets without recognition. When questioned as to whether he would not soon give Portland an opportunity to hear the improvement, if any, in his chest [illegible] voice, he raised his hands in horror and exclaimed that he did not want to hear the word music mentioned. He left for Salem on the afternoon train.

PETITIONING THE GOVERNOR.—Hon. C. B. Bellinger, counsel for Jack Powers, now confined in the county jail under sentence of hanging August 11th for the murder of Ben. Cornelius, presented yesterday to Governor Thayer a petition for executive clemency signed by over 10,000 citizens of the state. Hundreds of petitions are still in circulation and as many more names will be presented to the governor, before the fatal day, asking for Powers' pardon. The condemned man is pale with long continued suffering and the pain which his wound still causes him makes him as weak as a child. He is, however, still confident in the success of the efforts being made to prevent his death upon the scaffold.

IN RECOGNITION OF BRAVERY.—Jimmy Kernan, foreman of Columbian Engine Co. No. 3, will be presented this evening with a handsome gold watch in recognition of the gallant deed performed by him at Astoria on the 4th last. The watch is valued at $100 and is a gift from the Astoria firemen. The presentation will be made by Charles H. Stockton, foreman of Rescue Engine Co. No. 2, of Astoria, who comes up to-day for that purpose. A special meeting of No. Threes has been called to do all honor to their brave foreman.

EXTRAORDINARY BRAVERY.—The name of Henry Burnett should be recorded as that of one who proved his noble and unselfish heroism. He was boat-puller for Alfred West. When the boat was capsized he, by desperate effort, succeeded in getting hold of his captain, who was struggling and about to sink, but the poor man drowned in his grasp. With wonderful bravery and endurance, Burnett held on to his dead body for several hours, until he was compelled by sheer exhaustion to let him go.—Astorian.

ACCIDENT AT GOSHEN.—Last Sunday three young ladies were riding out, when the saddle on which Miss Dora Dickinson, aged 15 years, was riding, turned, her foot being fast in the stirrup strap. The sudden fall broke both bones of her left leg just above the ankle. Dr. T. W. Shelton, of Eugene, was summoned soon as possible and carefully and skillfully set the leg and left the young lady in as comfortable a condition as possible. Mrs. Dickinson, with her family, recently arrived from Surprise valley, Cal.

SENT TO JAIL.—George Collins, who was arrested several days ago for stealing $47 from John Larson, in the Montreal saloon on First street, had his case called for examination in the police court yesterday. By the advice of his counsel, Frank Clarno, he waived examination and was held to answer before the grand jury. The bonds required for his appearance was $300, and in default of these he was committed to the county jail.

FREE CIRCUS FOR THE ORPHANS.—Messrs. Sherman, proprietors of the circus now exhibiting in this city, have kindly remembered the children of the Good Samaritan Orphanage and the Home by inviting them to attend the matinee which they give this afternoon. The management of both institutions have accepted the invitation, and the children will attend in force.

CAN LEAVE AUGUST 4TH.—Alaskan tourists leaving Portland Friday morning, Aug. 4th, will connect at Tacoma the same evening with the steamship Dakota, which will leave that place for Port Townsend on the 5th and Victoria, the 6th inst., for Alaska; reaching the Sound on the return voyage on or about Aug. 25th.

FREIGHT FOR ALASKA.—The steamer Idaho, Capt. Carroll, arrived here from Alaska at 11:15 last night. She will sail Sunday, the 30th inst., for Victoria direct, returning thence to Port Townsend. She will receive freight for Alaska and way ports at the lower end of Ainsworth dock.

ENGINE FOR McMINNVILLE.—There arrived by the Oregon yesterday the new Ramsey hand fire engine from Seneca Falls, New York, ordered for the city of McMinnville by Gregory & Co. The machine cost about $900, is in good order and will be forwarded to its destination to-morrow.

NEW PATENTS.—The latest bulletin announces that patents have been granted to S. T. Northcott, of Marion county, Or., for a grain adjusting belt for harvesters, and to J. H. Clow, of Sheridan, Or., for a horse detacher.

W. C. T. U.—The regular monthly meeting of the Women's Christian Temperance Union will be held to-day at 2 P. M., in the Congregational church. A full attendance is requested to transact important business.

DIED.—The infant child of Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Reed died in Astoria yesterday. Mrs. Reed started by the Oregon expecting to go to San Francisco with the little one, who was quite ill.

BRIEF MENTION.

No courts yesterday.

Circus matinee this afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Regular weekly meeting of the Y. M. C. A. at their hal this evening.

MIDNIGHT FIRE.

DESTRUCTION OF MALARKEY'S ROW, CORNER FRONT AND A.

Kelly, Dunne & Co., Malarkey & Co. and W. C. Noon Burned Out. A Very Stubborn Fire Well Fought.

At half past twelve this morning fire was discovered in the rear of Kelly, Dunne & Co.'s oil store on Front street at the foot of A and destroyed the frame block occupied by this firm, by D. J. Malarkey & Co. and W. C. Noon. An alarm was turned in from box [illegible] at New Market theatre and the department responded promptly. So inflammable was the nature of the contents of Kelly, Dunne & Co.'s place, that the flames spread almost instantaneously to Malarkey's adjoining on the south. A great portion of Noon's goods were rolled out by willing hands to places of safety. The burning [illegible] across the narrow incline north and the Johnson frame buildings, occupied by J. C. Potts and Gould & Dixon and only by the most strenuous exertions of the firemen, who worked with wonderful assiduity, was the breach checked at this point.

Notwithstanding four streams were poured on the building, the flames increased and the fire became so hot that the crowd was forced off Front street, but the firemen remained. The bank of British Columbia opposite caught fire, but a well directed strong stream reaching to the cornice prevented spread of the flames, and further damage except the bursting of all front windows. Flinders' dock, north of A street, caught fire four times, but was saved by the combined efforts of citizens with buckets and the department. Fortunately there was a vacant space south of Noon's, and it was necessary to fight the fire on two sides only. The night was dark and the flames illuminated the entire city, the river and East Portland. Moored to the dock were the ships Hannah W. Dudley, President and Lancefield and as the light of the fire spread over the river their masts and rigging towered aloft against the dark background as grandly beautiful a picture as the most daring artist ever threw upon canvas, or in his most vivid imagination conceived. They stood there like antlered stags, as if too proud and stately to flee at the first approach of danger. But soon all was bustle and activity on their decks and preparations were made to leave their already warm and apparently dangerous position. Hawsers were cut, kedges got out by strong arms and earnest hands and slowly the vessels' prows swung into the stream and gradually, by warping, each hull was drawn to the center of the river, where they lay at anchor, safe from all possible harm.

The Dixie Thompson lay at Ash street dock undergoing repairs and was warped out of the way. Being in the heart of the business section, the fire drew an immense crowd.

THE LOSSES

Are as follows: D. J. Malarkey & Co., commission merchants, about $12,000; insured for $8000 in companies represented by Bachman Bros. Not a dollar's worth of their stock was saved. One company played a stream on the safe for several minutes, but were forced back. The books are believed to be all right.

The buildings belonged to the estate of Daniel J. Malarkey, and were valued at $5000; insured for $3000 in Bachman's agency.

Kelly, Dunne & Co. had commenced moving this week to the old O. S. N. Co. block, and had only a partial stock in the old place. Their loss is probably $5000, and is covered by policies in Hotaling's agency.

W. C. Noon's loss is about $1000; insured.

A. H. Johnson's building on the north side of A street was damaged to the extent of $600 or $700. Whether insured or not could not be learned.

As a precautionary measure, Todd & Biven's stock was removed. They suffer some from damage by water; protected by polices with Corbitt & Macleay.

Damage to Bank of British Columbia about $250; insured.

For its limited area the fire was probably the most stubborn that ever occurred in this city and could not have been better handled. For this morning's work, the chief engineer, assistants and privates in the rank deserve the greatest praise.

As usual there were a large number of petty thieves, entirely too anxious to assist in removing property, but the police, who were vigilant, prevented theft.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT.

At 1:50 A. M. Henry Obener, a blacksmith, assistant foreman of the hook and ladder company, and for 15 years an active member, was caught by the falling of a side wall of Kelly, Dunne & Co's place and received very serious injuries. Both legs are believed to be broken and his spine is probably injured. He was taken to Pfunder's drug store, where a physician was summoned.

LATER.

At 2:20 the fire was under control. The back part of Johnson's building is practically destroyed, together with the supports, and the loss will be greater than above stated.

Noon's large cylinder press for printing bags was destroyed, together with other machinery.

THE WHARF LINE.

PORTLAND, July 25, 1882.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

In THE OREGONIAN of this date appears a communication over the signature of "S. P." in which the writer tries to create the impression that the wharf recently erected by Messrs. Dolph and myself between Oak and Pine streets projected into the river beyond the wharf line, established by the ordinance of the city of Portland. This is untrue. The wharf does not extend beyond the line but falls a few feet inside of it. The statement in the same communication that I had endeavored to take the public street and appropriate the same to my private use is so manifestly false that no other than a "crank," ashamed to sign his name to his statement, would have written it. Neither Messrs. Dolph nor myself have ever claimed to own any part of the streets surrounding block 81, between Pine and Oak streets, and "S. P." well knew it when he wrote the above communication. D. P. THOMPSON.

ON THE MARKET TO-DAY.

Since the completion of two new roads leading from Portland to the old Cornell place, several eligible sites for summer houses have been chosen by well known capitalists here, and the entire plat will be put on the market this morning. The property has not been subdivided into arbitrary measurements, but will be sold according to the natural boundaries for homes, some of course being larger than others. One beautifully located spot at the crest of the ridge, affording a splendid view of the Columbia river and the surrounding country will be reserved for a park which will be reached by terraced roads. Intending buyers will see maps at the office of M. B. Rankin, No. 65 Union block.

Money is now being raised to widen the bed of the Cornell road to thirty feet, and this, together with the new roads will give safe and easy access to all parts of the new suburb. Much of the underbrush has been cleared away and Mountain View park is fast assuming its place among the delightful surroundings of Portland.

ACCIDENTS.

A Broken Arm—Crushed by a Falling Tree—Two Express Wagons Collide—A Serious Fall—Etc., Etc.

[illegible] year old son of [illegible] Candas, named [illegible] while playing with some other children on a [illegible] near his home in East Portland [illegible] fell, breaking the bones of his right arm in two places. Dr. [illegible] was called and reduced the fracture for the little sufferer.

[illegible] was thrown [illegible] which he did [illegible] that [illegible] the skin of his nose on the ground, escaping further [illegible] injury. His horse was [illegible] and did not run away.

About 7 o'clock yesterday morning two express wagons collided at the corner of Third and [illegible] streets. [illegible] in one of the horses' [illegible] and the animal [illegible] ran [illegible] Third street at a lively pace, but was stopped before he had done any damage [illegible].

[illegible] falling a day or two ago from the third story of [illegible] store, which is being raised, [illegible] upon the head of a passerby, [illegible] a slight scalp wound. The man interviewed Mr. Brackett, the contractor, demanding damages of [illegible]. The latter asked for time to consider the matter and the man went away. Nothing has been heard of the matter since.

A man whose name has not yet been ascertained was severely injured at Carroll's Point on the [illegible] a day or two ago, by the falling of a tree. He was employed as chopper in the woods by H. C. Campbell, who, as soon as possible after the accident, telegraphed to Dr. W. H. Watkins of this city for his services. The dispatch stated the man's skull was thought to be broken. Dr. Watkins went down on the steamer and has not yet returned.

Denis McMonagle, while intoxicated, went down on the new wharf being constructed on the property of the Narrow Gauge Railroad Company at the foot of Jefferson street, and started to walk across the unfloored portion of the wharf to Madison street, in doing which he fell off a plank into the excavation below, a distance of twenty feet, striking his head on a trestle imbedded in the mud, and cutting an ugly gash on his forehead and another on the chin. Dr. Binney was called and dressed his wounds which had the effect of sobering him up somewhat.

THE MISSOULA TRADE.

It seems that the people of Missoula show a disposition to assume business relations with the Pacific coast, and are ready to receive proposals for furnishing merchandise. The Missoulian of the 14th inst. reprints an article from THE OREGONIAN, and says editorially:

A new era is upon us. As will be seen by advertisements elsewhere in this paper, the Northern Pacific and O. R. & N. Co. are reaching out from Portland to Montana for the business which has been practically shut off for a year past through the embargo laid upon California produce by the Utah and Northern railway. The trade of Montana is at present a valuable bone of contention to be wrestled for by the wholesale dealers of the east and west. Sitting on the top rail of the fence, our merchants are in a position to coquette with the admirers from either side and to jilt either with impunity. They can now make the best possible terms with the Utah and Northern and the Union Pacific on the eastern hand, or with the Northern Pacific and O. R. & N. Co. on the other. We are no longer at the mercy of rapacious carriers, who could dictate ruinous terms of freight to our merchants, but in a position where the "longest pole knocks the persimmons." As a consequence we shall have the canned and fresh fruit dealers of California and Washington territory knocking at our doors with astonishing low prices. The days when we purchased three oranges or lemons for a dollar, and paid 25 cents per pound for apples are numbered with the past, and from this time on will only be known in history. California and Oregon clothing will hereafter be in market, and goods of every description will be as cheap in Missoula as in any other portion of the territory.

Here is Missoula's position. Would it not be well for Portland to woo so warmly that she will step off the fence and permit her affections to come to us? The O. R. & N. and Northern Pacific companies offer their services to expedite matters.

N. K. Lytle, an old and practical distiller of Ohio and Kentucky, has arrived at Jacksonville from the east, and is looking for a site upon which to erect a bourbon and rye distillery, if he can get the proper encouragement from the surrounding country.

A petrified horn, measuring 3 feet 2 inches in length, and 10 inches in circumference, was unearthed at the Winter hydraulic mines in Josephine county last week. It is probably an elephant's tusk. It will be sent to Prof. Condon, of the State University.

The stages are loaded heavily with mail almost every day, and passenger travel is also greater than can be accommodated. One or two extra stages have been run through to relieve the pressure, but nevertheless it is almost impossible to make the regular schedule time. The extraordinary amount of mail matter now coming for Oregon and Washington and Idaho territories, says the Yreka Journal, loads the stage every trip with 1500 to 5000 pounds, in addition to passengers, express and baggage, the mail having the precedence of everything. There never has been such an extensive quantity of mail since the old California Stage Co.'s days.

The whole vote cast at the recent city election in Seattle was 642.

A new Episcopal church building will soon be built at Pomeroy.

There is a great scarcity of brick in Seattle and many buildings are delayed in consequence.

The contract for a building to be used by the U. S. land office at Colfax, calls for its completion in thirty days.

During the past thirty days twenty Puget sound boys and girls have gone to California to enter different schools in that state.

The ground from the summit to near Sprague, and as far back as the eye can reach, has been burned black as charcoal by firing the bunch grass.

A heavy wind storm visited Walla Walla Sunday, rolling up the dust in immense clouds, breaking down an occasional shade tree, and turning over one or two chimneys.

The citizens of Cheney have formed a corporation with a capital of $2,000,000, to build a road from Farmington through Cheney and Medical lake to the Big Bend country.

Lieut. G. B. Backus, 1st cavalry, has been ordered to accompany Lieut. Henry H. Pierce, 21st infantry, in a scientific, geographical and historical expedition through the northern part of Washington territory.

A man named Joseph Lane was driving a span of colts to a header wagon, about eight miles from Walla Walla last Saturday, and the team becoming unmanageable he was thrown violently to the ground and very seriously injured.

Studies will be resumed in the territorial university on the 20th of September. Prof. L. J. Powell, the newly elected president, is authorized to organize a faculty and select a corps of efficient teachers to carry on the prescribed collegiate and academic courses of the institution.

W. J. Heath, of Spokane county, shows samples of two varieties of winter wheat, the Mediterranean and Walker. The wheat was sown September 28th, and when harvested, July 18th, was five and a half feet tall, well filled, having been in no way affected by the dry weather. Mr. Heath thinks his yield this year will be about forty bushels per acre, which is pretty fair for a "half crop."

An only child of S. N. Messenger of Spokane county, fifteen months old, was drowned last week by falling into a well. The child was playing about the porch and after a while the mother, who was at home alone, missed the little fellow and rushed frantically about for him. Nearly distracted, she approached an old well some distance from the house, which had been left uncovered, and, looking down saw her child floating in the water, which was only about three feet deep. The agonized mother screamed for assistance, and soon the infant was in her arms, but he was found quite dead, having been in the well probably some twenty minutes. The husband was working in another part of the county.

The Burrard Inlet oil factory is located at Coal harbor. The principal buildings are: Main building, 70x35 feet, two stories; drying sheds, 70x100; offices, quarters for managers and men, etc., etc., and a wharf 50x250. There is at the wharf a powerful crane, worked by steam, with a cage capable of scooping out a ton of fish each lift and dumping them into great vats, in which they are boiled and run off into a second class of vats, from which they go into powerful iron cage presses, the oil finding its way into purifiers below and the scrap into driers, from which it emerges in the form of fish guano and is shipped as an article of commerce. The driers have a capacity of ten tons a day. This establishment is now being put in order for the fall herring fishery.

Mrs. R. C. Sonnosen will return to Portland and resume her classes in drawing and painting about the 1st of August. A model will be furnished once a week for those who desire to study from life.

Wm. Bybee left for Josephine county yesterday to look after his mining interests near Waldo. The Chinese who contracted to dig his company's ditch have thrown up the job, which will necessitate making another contract with other parties. Mr. Bybee expects that water will be turned on by the middle of November next.

THE LANE COUNTY HOP YIELD.

[FROM THE OREGONIAN'S LOCAL CORRESPONDENT.]

EUGENE, July 24.

The condition of the hop crop in this county at present is one of much interest to the growers and others. I have taken considerable time and spent much labor in ascertaining the true status of the coming crop both in regard to yield and quality. I find outside of the yards located directly in the Willamette river bottom that the late dry spell has had the effect of bringing the vines out in burr much earlier than was expected, taking into consideration the lateness of the spring, and I will mean a smaller crop than was at first anticipated. The crop will be very much of a "top crop," i. e., the crop will be mostly on top of the poles, lighter in yield than when the "arms" bear hops near the ground. This kind of crop, though not heavy, is always the very best for quality, as the hops get more sunlight and ripen in prime condition, being smaller in size. The crop, from the great interest the growers take in it this year, will be in value the finest crop ever harvested in this county and will stand comparison with any fancy hop from any section of the country. The prices offered are good, but do not come up to growers' views. Mr. J. H. Brown received from a large firm in San Francisco, through their agent, Mr. A. V. Peters, an offer of thirty cents, delivered at the depot, but refused it; and judging from the expressions made by growers no hops will be contracted for or sold until ready for the market. The yield this year will bring into Lane county from $60,000 to $70,000, and as not more than ⅓ of one per cent. of this will leave the county the benefit we derive from this industry may be easily estimated. Picking will commence in about a month and no fears of a scarcity of pickers are entertained.

NEWS NOTES FROM EUGENE.

[FROM THE OREGONIAN'S LOCAL CORRESPONDENT.]

EUGENE, July 24.

A large lot of cord wood is being hauled to town, very plenty and cheap.

Many of our citizens are moving to the mountains and seaside to spend the heated term.

The residences of Mr. Jas. Holt, Mr. Sam. Holt, Mr. Jas. F. Robinson, Mr. Marion Wilkins, Mr. Chas. Horn and Mr. Chris Marks are nearing completion, and are a great addition to the wealth and appearance of the town.

Preparations are being made by our farmers for harvesting grain. The yield promises to be a good one, and, as far as we have heard, will be plenty and of excellent quality. The fall sown grain is the best and shows the utility of sowing grain early in the fall.

AT THE END OF LIFE.

So many years I've gone this way,
So many years! I must confess
Waste energies, must disappear,
Yet can I own to weariness.
Nor see I evening's shadows fall
Down my much inscriptioned wall
The warm air still is like midday,
And many mournful ghosts are past.
Laid still at last.

The fabled fardel lighter grew
As near the bourne the bearer drew
Life can, alas! no more surprise
By its continuous compromise.
New faces fill the chairs, and so
Our interest in the game runs low
Quiet pleasures longest stay.
Experience packs so much away.
I wait and wonder long ago
This wonder was my constant guest,
Wonder at our caviling,
And at myself within the ring

Still that abides with me, some quest
Before my footsteps seems to lie,
But quest of what I scarcely know,
Life itself makes no reply
A quest for naught that earth supplies,
This is our life's last compromise.

GOTLIEB'S CONSTANCY.

BY FORLORN HOPE.

The first rays of the morning sun had not yet tinged the hill tops surrounding the German hamlet of V. when a young man, attired in the villagers' Sunday suit, knocked at the door of a cottage just on the outskirts of the town. The knock, timid at first, met with no response, but at the second and louder one, a young girl opened the door, and said:

"Is that you, Gotlieb?"

"Yes, Rose, I could not go without seeing you once more," answered the young man. "Come and sit with me on this bench; I would speak to you, that the sound of your voice and your pretty face may be the last recollections I shall carry with me to that land beyond the seas."

With words half deprecatory at the unseasonableness of the hour, yet calling him a foolish Gotlieb, with those accents of love and tenderness women give to words otherwise insignificant, she stopped outside in the flush morning air. Very lovely she was in the fresh of her girlhood, for Rose Franish was scarcely sixteen, and sixteen years ne'er crowned a lovelier face. So thought Gotlieb, as he took in at one glance the mass of wavy, blonde hair, the fair face, lit by eyes of glorious blue, from whose shining depths came mingled glances of shyness, coquetry and innocence, down to the tiny bare feet that sought a hiding place in the long, smooth grass.

"Rose," he exclaimed, "do you know that you are as lovely as the picture of the Madonna that hangs in the chapel of the great house on the hill."

"Am I?" was the response in a tone half questioning, half assenting. "But I'm not half as handsomely dressed," and she looked down at the coarse peasant press she wore with a look of unmistakable disgust.

"Rose! Rose! You are prettier in that dress than the burgomaster's wife in all her velvets and fine feathers."

"Then, how much handsomer would I not be with them? Besides, Master Gotlieb, you forget that every one does not see me with your eyes."

"No, nor would I have them so see you," he said quietly, for he was stung that at the moment of a separation that might last for years, she could think of her dress. "See, the sun is climbing the mountains, and I must bid you good-by. Don't forget me, Rose, and, God prospering, I shall be with you in five years at the most. Promise not to forget me, my sweet Rose," and twining his arms around the young girl's waist, he imprinted a kiss on her lips as she sobbed out her promise, and e'er many moments was already far on his road. With a heavy heart, Rose turned and entered the cottage.

It was the same story, so old, yet always possessing the charm of youth and novelty; the story heart has whispered to heart since time was; the story whose "open sesame" to the realms of happiness are the words, "I love and am beloved." Between the two and the realization of their dreams had intervened the arm of the law, of that German law that, with an eye to the future, prohibits marriage unless both parties can produce a given sum as security against pauperism. Of the influence of that law on the morals and prosperity of the people let statistics speak. I only deal with it as to its influence on Rose and Gotlieb, causing their separation, as neither possessed as many kreutzers as florins were required, and both knew that years must elapse before the requisite sum could be amassed.

Gotlieb had heard of that land where wealth only waited to be garnered, as wheat from the fields; where industry and perseverance were sure rounds in the ladder of opulence; so with a sad heart, it is true, but wooed by the hope of a speedy return, possessed of that which to Rose and himself would be riches, he had determined to try his fortune in the new world. Rose had made no effort to retain him, understanding the impossibility of attaining their wish if he remained. Besides, she had an inherent love of dress, which she knew could never be gratified in their native hamlet, but which she saw indulged to its fullest extent by the immense wealth with which her day dreams pictured Gotlieb should return. Of course, such thoughts had never found voice in his presence, but they were the constant solace and companions of the young girl as she fulfilled her daily tasks.

That she loved Gotlieb she felt sure, for at the dance, the race, the festival, was he not the lightest and surest of foot, the handsomest lad the whole country round? So, when Gotlieb had cast loving glances on her, she had not been too shy to return them, and it had all ended in the exchange of the little golden circle it had taken months of economy to purchase, and the voyage to America.

* * * * * *

One evening, just at the same time of the year, five years after Gotlieb's departure, a traveler could have been seen wending his way down the path that led to the hamlet of V——. As a sudden turn in the road brought the village in full sight, a cry of joy escaped his lips, and although a hard day's walk lay behind him, he quickened his footsteps as his eye took in each well-remembered spot. Suddenly he stopped short, and an exclamation of surprise fell from his lips as he became convinced that some house stood in the place of the cottage he sought. Involuntarily his mind reverted to the last time he had stood on that spot and taking a parting look at the sleeping hamlet.

It was very little changed since then, the large house alone standing out as an intruder in the picture he had so indelibly impressed on his memory. What could it portend? Was Rose dead?—he had not heard from her for three years. His heart stood still at the thought, when suddenly a light broke over his features. The house was not hers—she only boarded with the old couple. They, no doubt, had died, and some rich burgomaster had bought the place. Where, then, should he seek Rose? No doubt the people of the great house could tell him of her. Ah! Gotlieb, Gotlieb! your faithful heart could believe her dead, but false—never! You would as soon have doubted your own truth as her fidelity!

With renewed courage he descended the path. In the garden a young child was at play, while a lady watched its sport. She wore the dress of the upper class—that he could see. It was, then, as he surmised. Some rich land-owner had purchased the ground and erected the house. With a heart lightened of a weight he was scarcely conscious it bore, he reached the entrance. Tapping gently at the gate, he bade the lady good evening. At the sound of his voice she rose abruptly and turned a frightened look on the speaker, and as her eye fell on his face, a single cry escaped her lips—"Gotlieb!"

"Rose—Rose Franish, am I dreaming?" he said, looking excitedly, alternately at her and at the child, who now clung to her skirts. Five years had made a greater change in her face than in his. Hers had lost its childish contour; its happy, contented look, and although her eyes were as blue, and the ripples of her hair as golden as the day he left her, there was such a change that, but for that cry, he would have doubted that his betrothed stood before him. "Rose, tell me, am I dreaming?" he repeated, in a voice so full of anguish that tears filled her eyes as she said:

"Come, you must not stand here. Some one may see us, and that would not be well," and catching his hand, she dragged, rather than led him into the house. Shutting the door carefully, she continued: "Now, Gotlieb, you may speak freely—we are alone."

She was much calmer now than he was, for she had contemplated this meeting for months, while to him it had come with the force of the unexpected. He had trusted her so implicitly, and now to find himself deceived.

"You have been married three years," he said, simply. He had no need to ask; he knew it was the time when her letters had ceased.

"Yes; the burgomaster's wife died, and and," she hesitated.

"And you married him. He could give you what I might not be able to do." He spoke quietly now, so quietly that she was deceived, and with the selfishness that was such a blot on her character, she could not bear that her should inflict so little pain.

"What would you?" she said. "You could dance with the girls and enjoy your Sunday promenade, because in that new world no one knew of poor Rose. But here it was different. Everywhere I was left to myself, for was I not Gotlieb's betrothed? Not one of these bodies could see that I could dance, and yet be true to you. Two years passed so slowly three years seemed to me an age. The burgomaster was kind. He gave me pretty things and made me fancy, and called me the sweetest Rose in all Germany. Beside, how did I know but what you one day might see a prettier face than mine, and never come back?"

He listened to her as if in a dream. Could it be for this he had toiled and saved? He might tell her that never dance, or festival had he seen since last his arm encircled her in the waltz. But words and protestations were useless now, and he began to feel she was not worthy of devotion he had given her. Bitterly he contrasted this meeting with what he had so often pictured it. How often he had thought of her delight when she should listen to stories of that land that had been so kind to him; for Gotlieb had found the true philosopher's stone. Success, which, with care and economy, had transmuted his labor into gold. As he realized how worthless it was all to him now, he bowed his head on his hands and a great heart-sob escaped him.

Rose was touched deeply by this first sign of how much he suffered. Her better nature was aroused, and, bending quickly over him, she said: "Gotlieb, do not mourn so. I am not worth so much regret. I loved you, but I loved myself better. Believe me, however, I would have spared you the pain of this meeting. God only knows how I prayed that you might be as false to me as I was to myself. If it will console you, I will say what no wife should utter—you alone have held my heart. Does that suffice? Go, now. My husband may come in at any moment. The meeting would not be pleasant to either. I know my duty. He is kind, and believes I have forgotten you. Let him not be undeceived. Good-by, Gotlieb," and rising, she held out her hand to him.

He knew she was right, it was best he should go. Seizing her hand, he imprinted a kiss upon it, and was gone. The next day he left his native hamlet, never to return. She had been faithless, but she had loved him. That was the one consolation he carried back with him to the land of his adoption, where success still attended his efforts although no other face made him forget the false fair features of Rose Franish.

THE GREAT NORTHWEST.

What a Cincinnati Paper Thinks of the Pastures of the Future.

A remarkable fact connected with the rapid development of our northwestern territories is that the better we are made acquainted with them the more valuable do they prove to be for the uses and pursuits of civilized man. Vast areas which, not long since, were placed upon the map as arid deserts, bleak mountains, or impracticable wildernesses, are now transformed into fruitful fields, rich pastoral ranges, or wide spreading "mineral belts" of limitless wealth, all inviting the steady settler and daring adventurer to come in and possess them. Scaling the bad lands of Dakota, which for many years were the boundary of white settlements, and following the line of the Northern Pacific railrad, a large portion of the great territory of Wyoming is proven fertile and practicable and profitable to the agriculturists: and onward to Oregon and the Pacific are already seen the smoke of the settlers' camp and cottage fire in a blue line across the continent.

As the Indians and the buffaloes recede thousands of cattle and sheep, under the care of judicious owners and keepers, graze upon the richest pastures of the continent, and slake their thirst in the sparkling streams of Wyoming and Idaho, thriving even more vigorously than their progenitors did on the plains and prairies of Texas and Kansas. Even across the border, the fabulous swamps of Saskatchewan, on closer inspection and experiment, have been proven excellent sites for teeming wheatfields, and the arctic possessions of the old Hudson's Bay Company, once only esteemed for the peltries they yielded, are now deemed worthy the attention of capitalists and colonists, under the lead of British noblemen whose lessening incomes from patrimonial estates admonish them to seek new theaters of action.

In fact, observing men, who are yet far from acknowledging themselves old, can easily remember when Marcy's and Fremont's exploring expedition first revealed to inquiring minds the peculiar unpleasantnesses of the Neosho country and the dreary difficulties of the Great American desert, and now realize with surprise that the regions beyond are made facile and practicable for the slower going as well as for the adventurous and enterprising. The question arises, were we wrong in our first conceits in regard to the properties and capacities of those vast regions, or have the elements at man's service for subduing and occupying them become correspondingly more efficient?

When we call to mind the state of things in this respect at the time Fremont and Carson followed the buffalo tracks over the Rockies, or even when the Mormons made their hegira from Illinois to Deseret, and compare them with the present, we must admit that nature had then completed her work in preparing those great theaters for the uses of men, and that, with the increase of the country's wealth and population, the inventive and industrial capacities of our people have so rapidly multiplied as to amplify beyond comparison their properties of adaptation and powers of accomplishment. Railroads, steam plows, and thrashers, artesian wells, engines for multiplying human and equine strength, discoveries of coal and the precious metals, subduing the savage tribes—these and other circumstances and causes have rendered it possible now for the star of empire "to take its course" over great acres where, only a few years ago, it was halted and scotched. In the light of these facts, the short-sighted dogmatism of editors and statesmen who, scarce ten years ago, ridiculed the efforts of enlightened capitalists to construct railways over and north of the great mountain ranges west of the Mississippi, seems really contemptible and puny, though then resulting in panic and ruin. It is not extravagant to suppose the child is even now born who may live to see Wyoming and Montana as populous as the state of New York, and even the comparatively sterile plains of Arizona the abodes of enlightened and socail man.

UNDISCOVERED CRIMINALS.

Something About Crimes whose Perpetrators have Managed to Elude Detection.

The New York Graphic asks: Who killed the beautiful young lady whose body was found in the Regent Park canal some years ago, with a ghastly wound in the back of her head? Who killed the demi-monde in Great Coram street, cutting her throat and robbing her of her money and jewelry, the poor fruit of her life of sin? Who killed the two old women in Southwark, at high noon, in their shop, in one of the most crowded streets in that part of London? Who killed Mary Stannard? Who killed Mrs. Billings? Who killed Mrs. Hall in Boston, a few weeks ago, cutting her throat in her own hallway, at 7 o'clock in the morning, and then walking calmly away? And now, who killed Mr. Gutermuth? Are all these crimes to remain undetected and unpunished?

The Troy Times continues the inquiry: Who killed Mr. Sargent, in Troy, twenty years ago, on a Christmas eve, as he was going home with presents for his wife and little ones? Who killed Officer Crandall, at Albia, shooting him dead as he was patrolling the streets of that quiet portion of our city? Who killed Officer Burnham, in Lansingburg, last fall? Who killed Peter P. Ray, in Raymertown, a few years since, while he was walking along the highway to his home? These are local happenings. Murder does not always "out"—the more's the pity.

The Cincinnati Enquirer says: "Who killed Prof. Crawley, of this city, when accompanying a couple of ladies to their home several years ago? Who were the murderers of Pat Malloy, in the ball-room on the canal, near Vine street, and whatever became of the body? Where are, and who were, the murderers of Johnson, whose dead body was found in the road at Oakley? Who was it that sent a ball crashing through the brain of Harry Baldwin, just before he was found lying in an alley near the corner of Ninth and Elm streets? Who were the perpetrators of the Ashland murders, which sent a thrill of horror through this country, and concerning which every syllable is still read with profound interest? Who is responsible for the death of little Zoe Wilkins, a mystery which the St. Louis press still discuss, and which will probably never be solved? And while we are away from home, and on this subject, we might ask who killed Dr. Burdell, a mystery which still excites the middle-aged people of New York, though the rising generation never heard of it? Who killed Nathan and who was it that stole into the [illegible] Park and slaughtered the Messrs. [illegible] and Barker?

The horse has always been spoken of as the noble animal; but the instantaneous photographs which have been made of him threaten to bring him into well-merited contempt. You can't respect an animal which looks like a giraffe with a broken back.—[illegible]

Scarcely any disease to which human beings are subjected is so thoroughly discouraging as Fever and Ague. The periodical return of alternate chills, fever and sweating, is terribly depressing. Ayer's Ague Cure is the only remedy known, which is certain to cure permanently, by expelling the malarial poison which produces the disease. It does this surely, and leaves no ill effects upon the system.

A Chicago Romance.

Chicago Tribune.

"Must I really go, sweetheart?"

"Yes," replied Lillian McGuire, placing her shapely white hand in his, and looking into his face with a tender earnestness that showed the true womanliness of her nature. "It is better, far better for both of us that we should part forever," but as she spoke the hot tears of pain welled up into her beautiful brown eyes—those eyes that had watched with their bright glances and dreamy tenderness so many [illegible]—and with a little sob of pain Lillian's head was bowed upon George W. Simpson's shoulder in an ecstasy of grief.

"Couldn't you put a four-year limit on it, [illegible] darling?" asked the young man, bending [illegible] over the little head that was pillowed so trustingly just under his left ear. "I certainly ought to have as good a chance as a Chinaman."

A low moan of pain and a convulsive shake of the little head was the only response.

But George was not to be denied so easily. "Can I not have one hope?" he said, "one little nickel plated, 10-cent hope?"

Lillian lifted her head and looked at him steadily.

"Perhaps," she said, in cold [illegible] Bay tones, "you would drop if a house fell on you, but I beg to doubt it. Know then, since you will have it, that under no circumstances can I ever accept your proffered love, for I am a packer's daughter and packers' daughters come high." This with a haughty expression that lower-case type cannot convey.

George W. Simpson saw at once that this proud beauty had been making a plaything of his love. The revelation was a terrible one, but he bore it bravely.

"Very well," he said in husky, haven't-had-a-drink-in-four-hours tone, "you have stamped with the iron heel of scorn upon the tender violet of my budding love, but some day, when your children—little winsome brats with sunny smiles and an assortment of colic that will keep you up three nights every week—are climbing upon your knee until you are in danger of becoming knee-sprung, you will perhaps remember, with a tinge of sadness in the recollection, how you toyed with the love of a loyal, trusting, Cook county heart, and threw forever over a young and happy life the black pall of a disappointed hope and crushed ambition. I have seen the roses of my love wither and waste away until they lie shriveled and blighted by the dusty roadside of life, and you can bet that I feel pretty tough about it. I have seen my beautiful and stately Ship of Hope, with its tall, shapely masts and towering wings of snowy canvas, that sailed away so buoyantly and bravely over the shimmering sea not many months ago, come back to me a shapeless wreck—the tapering spars that were so white and clean now jagged and broken, and to them clinging the dark sea weeds, while of the sails that rivaled the clouds in fleecy purity there remain only blackened shreds that flap dismally in the moaning wind, whose voice seems to sound the requiem and dirge of my dead and buried love. I have got the bone wreck, and don't you forget it."

Lillian looked at him steadily for a moment. "Do you mean these words you have spoken, George?" she asked.

"You can bet your life I do," he answered in low, passionate tones.

"And do you really love me so dearly?"

"Well, I should gasp," was the reply, a pearly tear glistening in George's off eye.

"Then," said Lillian, twining her arms about his neck, "I will roost on your knee next Tuesday evening, as usual. Papa would never forgive me if I let a man who can talk like that go out of the family."

Overthrow of the "Boss" Decreed.

Philadelphia Times.

Gen. Beaver committed a double blunder when he denounced the independent movement as "born of hate, anger and prejudice." It was a blunder in point of fact and a most impolitic blunder besides. The independent movement has been born of the republican forbearance that perished only when it ceased to be a virtue, and that is why it can't be made to dicker with the bosses whose despotism and corruptions called it into active existence. It doesn't hate Beaver, but it hates implacably the boss methods he obeyed at Chicago and at Harrisburg, and means to destroy them.

Eastern Freight Situation.

NEW YORK, July 25.—The slight improvement in the clipper freight market noted at close of last week still continues, and both leading ships, viz: The St. Francis and Dakota, are doing very well, the former to get off this week and the latter about the 5th proximo. The Triumphant finished this morning, taking in 4000 cases of oil. Rates are about steady at last quotations. Tonnage is scarce and prices for available ships strongly maintained. Both California lines have all that they require for the next sixty days, and therefore are not in market. It is stated that the Young America will load for Portland instead of San Francisco. The ship North America has gone to East Boston to finish loading with railroad iron, and will probably sail Saturday. Markets are generally steady under moderate demand for most descriptions of merchandise. Wheat is unsettled and easier.

Good Crops in Texas.

ST. LOUIS, July 23.—The secretary of the Dallas (Texas) board of trade makes the following crop report for northern Texas: Copious rains have fallen all over north Texas. The corn crop is made, and will produce fifty bushels per acre. Cotton is making rapid growth, and is waist high. No worms or caterpillars have appeared, and it promises a bale and a half to the acre. The gross product of gardens and orchards and vineyards, like the grain fields, have been simply extraordinary up to date, and it can be said this has been the most profitable year in the history of Texas.

Philadelphia Wool Market.

PHILADELPHIA, July 25.—Wool steady and in good demand. Medium washed combings and delaine 47½@48c.; New Mexican and Colorado medium 27@28c.; coarse carpet wool 22@25c. Other grades unchanged.

PERSONAL AND GENERAL.

A personal friend of [illegible] says he would [illegible] the government [illegible] He would [illegible].

[illegible] the [illegible] is [illegible] at the head of the [illegible] There should be a strong [illegible] between [illegible] states and [illegible].

[illegible] the [illegible] is that the [illegible] in Kansas. [illegible] to the [illegible].

Dr. [illegible], the colored orator, has written a book about his travels and observations in the [illegible] parts with which he made [illegible] and [illegible].

[illegible] was serenaded at [illegible] made a little speech to his friends and [illegible] in which he was moved to remark that the lessons, need and admonition of the hour is frugality, foresight and care. This admonition comes from a graduate of the great school of experience.

Commenting upon the Butterworth incident in congress, the New York Herald suggests as the most efficient way to stop such scenes will be to deny to the next offender the liberty of revising his remarks, and to compel them to go upon the official record for his life-long disgrace. The suggestion should be taken.

The London Spectator touches upon an interesting defect in the system of Herbert Spencer, and those who think with him, when it says, in a review of Mr. Leslie Stephen's "Science of Ethics," that "evolution cannot recognize an ideal except in the further development of the actual, and since this development is inevitable there is no reason why it should be aimed at."

Gen. Irwin McDowell, commanding the military division of the Pacific, will be retired in October under the new law, and it is generally understood that Gen. Schofield will succeed him. Gen. Sherman will be retired in February, 1884, Gen. Sheridan in 1895, Gen. Hancock in March, 1890, Gen. Schofield in 1895, Gen. John Pope in July, 1886, Gen. Howard in 1894, Gen. Terry in 1891, Gen. Christopher C. Augur in August, 1885, and Gen. Crook in 1892.

"Striking oil" is an increasing excitement in the wild hemlock woods and forest hills of Cherry Grove, in Warren county, Pennsylvania. Now comes the news that the new found wonder, the "Mystery" well, or "No. 646," is eclipsed by a still more newly developed neighbor. The champion spouter, the Bob Ingersoll of oil wells, so far, is named "Murphy well, No. 2." It sends up into the air and into the lines of modern times the astounding quantity of four to five thousand barrels of petroleum every day. The oil market has collapsed. Petroleum is selling for half a dollar per barrel.

DR. PAUL M. BRENAN,
THE
Most Successful Physician on the Pacific Coast in the Treatment of
ALL CHRONIC & DIFFICULT DISEASES

DR. BRENAN WILL GUARANTEE TO CURE any form of disease of the generative organs or private disease. He has become an expert in the treatment of disease, weakness and derangement of the reproductive organs of both male and female, including diseases caused by the FOLLIES OF YOUTH.

Such as Spermatorrhea, or Seminal Weakness, or Loss of Perfect Vitality. Nearly two-thirds of all the chronic diseases spring either directly or indirectly from some derangement of the sexual system, and yet this subject is neglected by the majority of the Medical Profession.

I know that persons who are unfortunate enough to be afflicted by any form of sexual disease have a delicacy in calling upon the proper physician for aid, from a sense of modesty and sometimes from ignorance, and permit those diseases to exist until their constitutions become corrupted, their organization broken down, and the hope of future happiness is ruined, until death becomes a welcome messenger to carry them out of their miserable existence.

Everything strictly confidential and in all circumstances.

Lost manhood perfectly restored. Catarrh, Bronchitis, Throat Diseases, Skin Diseases, Rheumatism, Kidney Complaint, and all Diseases of the Eye and Ear, Stomach and Bladder, treated with success.

Consultation Free, and a list of printed questions sent to those living at a distance who cannot consult him personally. Enclose postage stamp for answer.

THE BARLOW ROAD.

THE MT. HOOD AND BARLOW ROAD COMPANY having recently purchased the franchise of the Old Barlow Road Company, announce that their road across the Cascade Mountains is open for all kinds of travel. The company having constructed a branch road from Sandy P. O. to the Toll Gate on the south bank of the river Sandy, the travel will be able to avoid the long, tedious route over the Devil's Back Bone and the five miles of heavy sand on the old road.

The bridges are all in good repair, and all the heavy hills are graded. The company are spending large amounts of money on the road, and will spare no pains nor expense in maintaining it as the best route over the Cascade Mountains in the state. Supply stations with provisions at the Toll Gate, Summit Prairie and White River. Toll reasonable.
